"I have had a lesson—O God, Utterson, what a lesson I have had!" "I am very low, Utterson," replied the doctor, drearily, "very low. It will not last long, thank God." "...within I was conscious of a heady recklessness, a current of disordered sensual images..." "Even as good shone upon the countenance of the one, evil was written broadly and plainly on the face of the other." "...I learned to recognise the thorough and primitive duality of man..." "...fond of the respect of the wise and good among my fellow-men, and thus, as might have been supposed, with every guarantee of an honourable and distinguished future" 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> "a kind of black, sneering coolness... really like Satan." "...it was hellish to see. It wasn't like a man; it was like some damned juggernaut." "He is not easy to describe. There is something wrong with his appearance; something displeasing, something downright detestable." "And next moment, with ape-like fury, he was trampling his victim under foot and hailing down a storm of blows, under which the bones were audibly shattered." "He broke out in a great flame of anger stamping with his foot, brandishing the cane and carrying on like a madman." 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Jekyll's home described at the beginning of the novel: "certain sinister block of building." Utterson taking the officer to Hyde's house "...the first fog of the season. A great chocolate-coloured pall lowered over heaven, for here it would be dark...there would be a glow of a rich, lurid brown, like the light of some strange conflagration..." "wind was continually charging and routing these embattled vapours." 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> "He began to go wrong, wrong in mind; ... Such unscientific balderdash..." "I never saw a man so distressed as you were by my will; unless it were that hide-bound pedant, Lanyon, at what he called my scientific heresies." "And now, you who have so long been bound to the most narrow and material views, you who have denied the virtue of transcendental medicine, you who have derided your superiors— behold!" the direction of my scientific studies, which led wholly toward the mystic and the transcendental..."
